THE SELECTION OF SUITABLE TEXT-BOOKS

What Mission Study text-books should be used in the next college year?

The importance of a careful choice of courses is greater than at any time in the past.

Missions has now been developed into a science; the literature of the subject has become very large; the text-books have multiplied at a rate to be almost bewildering; the study of the subject in colleges, universities, and theological seminaries is not only being pursued with greater thoroughness and a keener eye to its practical issues, but has grown rapidly in volume; and the number of students to be directed in their investigation of missionary questions is now much larger than in any previous year. For these reasons among others great care should be exercised in making the selection of text-books.

The following general principles should be observed in selecting text-books:

(1) No class should pursue a Mission Study course without using a text-book. A suitable text-book may be found on each of the important missionary themes.

(2) Books should be chosen which have been prepared for text-book purposes. A large list suitable to use in student classes is given on pages 12-14 of this pamphlet.

(3) Courses of study should be progressive. A four years' syllabus should be followed, wherever possible.

(4) The study of foreign missions should be pursued with relation to the study of North American problems and the study of the Bible. A four years' curriculum has been outlined having such a correlation in view and known as "College Voluntary Study Courses." The first semester courses in each year are devoted to Bible Study; those for the second semester pertain to the study of foreign missions and North American problems.

Where this program of correlated study is followed it is imperatively necessary that the second semester courses should start at the very beginning of the semester.

PROGRAM OF STUDY FOR 1917-1918

Of the text-books which are especially recommended for the year the new ones are: Dr. Patton's "The Lure of Africa"; Professor Soper's "Non-Christian Religions of the World" (ready in the fall); and Bishop Lambuth's "Medical Missions" (ready in December).

A MINIMUM PROGRAM

The minimum program of mission study for 1917-1918 in each college should therefore consist of the following:

I. CHRISTIAN STANDARDS IN LIFE. By J. Lovell Murray and Frederick M. Harris. Includes daily Bible readings and topics for discussion. 176 pages; price, 50 cents.
Arranged for twelve studies.

No better approach to the whole subject of foreign missions can be made than through contact with some of the great spirits that during the Christian centuries have flashed out as high types of the heroic in missionary endeavor. This subject can be made quite elementary and at the same time it lends itself to the most profound research.

This is the first missionary text-book in the College Voluntary Study Series. It treats of twelve great Christian leaders, six of them foreign missionaries, and shows how their lives illustrated outstanding principles of Christian living.

II. A CHALLENGE TO LIFE SERVICE. By Frederick M. Harris and Joseph C. Robbins. Includes daily Bible readings and topics for discussion. 152 pages; price 50 cents.
Arranged for twelve studies.

This book offers studies in certain important aspects of the Kingdom of God, its ideals, scope, privileges and obligations. It exalts the place and duty of the individual citizen of the Kingdom. The relation of the Church to the Kingdom is emphasized and the sweep of the Kingdom's interests is shown to be always world-wide.

III. NON-CHRISTIAN RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD. By Edmund D. Soper (In preparation.) Includes daily Bible readings and topics for discussion. Price 50 cents. 60
Arranged for twelve studies.

Every year witnesses a deeper interest in the non-Christian religions of the world. They furnish a study at once fascinating and highly rewarding. This text-book presents a sympathetic examination of the main elements in Hinduism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Confucianism, Shintoism, Parseeism and Judaism and compares their teachings with those of the Christian faith.

IV. CHRISTIANIZING COMMUNITY LIFE. By Harry F. Ward and Richard H. Edwards. Includes daily Bible readings and topics for discussion. 176 pages; price, 50 cents. 60
Arranged for twelve studies.

No more fitting subject could conclude this four years' program of study than that of the present-day problems of society in North America and throughout the world and the solutions which applied Christianity has to offer. This text-book follows the student from college into his community and shows him how as a Christian he can make his contribution to the social betterment of his fellows. The problems of community life in non-Christian lands as well as those in North America are considered.

PARALLEL COURSES

The four courses above mentioned are far from sufficient for the student who wishes to be well informed as to the world operations of Christianity. They should furnish him with a right attitude to the missionary program of the Church and with an appetite for further investigation. They are to be regarded merely as a minimum requirement. In every college these courses should be supplemented by others dealing with specifically foreign missionary questions. For the year 1917-1918 the following are suggested for special attention:

I. The Lure of Africa. By Cornelius H. Patton. 224 pages; paper, 40 cents; cloth, 60 cents.
Arranged for seven studies.
Suggestions to leaders, 10 cents.

This text-book, which is just off the press, is a rich combination of information and interest. The author is a careful student of African affairs and has traveled widely in the Dark Continent. His racy, vivid account of present-day conditions there is reliable and abounds in incident. In the main, pagan Africa is treated, but North Africa also comes in for notice. The threatening advance of Islam is described, as are also the remarkable gains of Christianity. Africa is being deeply affected by the War and challenges attention strongly at this time.

II. South American Neighbors. By Homer C. Stuntz. 211 pages; paper, 40 cents; cloth, 60 cents.
Arranged for eight studies.
Suggestions to leaders, 10 cents.

The latest text-book dealing with South America which now has an exceptional claim on the attention of the Christians of the United States and Canada. The pages reflect the spirit and deliberations of the recent Congress at Panama.

III. The Students of Asia. By G. Sherwood Eddy. 209 pages; paper, 35 cents; cloth, 50 cents.
Arranged for eight studies.
Suggestions to leaders free.

This book gives a vivid account of the conditions affecting the college men and women of Eastern lands, the educational systems of their countries, their racial qualities, manner of life, modes of thought, religious interests, moral perils and the paths to power that open out before them as the future leaders of nations in transition. Their present responsiveness to the message of Christianity is graphically described.

IV. A choice of two courses is suggested for the Senior year.
1. Medical Missions. By W. R. Lambuth. (In preparation.)

Among the methods used for extending the Kingdom of God in the non-Christian world medical missions has been in many ways the most effective. Besides giving physical relief to individuals it opens the way for the preacher; it produces a favorable attitude of mind; it gives a practical expression of the spirit of Jesus; it sets standards for the social errand of Christian missions; it is the Gospel in deed. This text-book is being prepared for students by Bishop Lambuth, an authority on the subject and a former medical missionary. It is expected from the press in December.

2. The Present World Situation. By John R. Mott. 259 pages; paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

Arranged for eight studies.

Suggestions to leaders free.

No more timely book could be offered for study than this. Strictly speaking, it is the present world situation as it affects the problem of world evangelization that is under discussion. It is "The Decisive Hour" up to date, only treated along quite new lines. Broad questions of statesmanship and strategy are discussed as they relate not only to direct missionary operations, but also to the whole large problem of Christianizing all the relations between nations.

Many other excellent Mission Study text-books are available. See pages 12 to 14.

The Educational Secretaries of the Student Volunteer Movement will gladly give counsel in regard to the selection of courses.

COURSES FOR THEOLOGICAL SEMINARIES

Among the best text-books for theological students are the following:

Barton. Educational Missions.

Beach. Renaissant Latin America.

Brown. Rising Churches in Non-Christian Lands.

Faunce. Social Aspects of Foreign Missions.

Findings of the Continuation Committee Conferences in Asia, 1912-1913. (Arranged by Topics with General and Chapter introductions by Prof. Harlan P. Beach.)

Mott. The Present World Situation.

Mott. The Pastor and Modern Missions.

Murray. The Apologetic of Modern Missions.

Saunders. The Story of Buddhism.

Speer. The Light of the World.

Speer. South American Problems.

Zwemer. The Unoccupied Mission Fields of Africa and Asia.

Zwemer. Islam: A Challenge to Faith.

DAILY BIBLE READINGS

It is of great importance that the study of foreign missions should be integrated into the correlated scheme for voluntary religious study to which reference has been made. Where this is done, the study of foreign missions and of North American problems will have right of way in the second half of the college year, and many students entering Mission Study classes will then cease to belong to Bible Study classes.

It would be deplorable if these students should give up their habit of daily devotional Bible Study. To stimulate and direct this habit, two courses of daily readings have been prepared, "The Christian Social Order," and "The Missionary Message of the Bible." This feature should be strongly emphasized through the Mission Study classes. The price of these readings is 5 cents when ordered with a text-book, or 10 cents when ordered separately; 15 for $1.00, or 100 for $5.00.

METHODS OF PROMOTION

Missionary committees will find in the pamphlet "The Organization of Mission Study Among Students," price 5 cents, a discussion of the methods of interesting and organizing students in the study of missions. A list of pamphlets for the missionary committee is given on page 15 of this Prospectus.

Committees are earnestly requested to keep the office of the Student Volunteer Movement informed of their plans and to honor promptly all requests for reports. Methods that prove especially successful in enlisting students in classes, in maintaining the interest, or in directing it into channels of practical service should be reported to the office. If difficulties arise at any point in the campaign, these also should be reported. The Educational Secretaries will be glad to give any assistance in their power.

HELPS FOR LEADERS OF CLASSES

Leaders of classes feel, or ought to feel, the need of assistance. They should study carefully two brief but most useful pamphlets, Dr. Sailer's "General Suggestions for Leaders of Mission Study Classes," and Miss Day's "Mission Study Class Method" (price, 5 cents each). Manley's "Missionary Study Principles" (price 50 cents) is a longer and more thorough treatment of the subject.

In addition to these general helps, there are separate pamphlets of "Suggestions to Leaders" on some of the text-books mentioned above and on almost all of those in the longer list that follows.

The Educational Secretaries will gladly correspond with leaders.

REFERENCE MATERIAL

It is important that for all the courses being studied there should be available an ample supply of reference material.

A carefully annotated list of missionary books is contained in the "Selected Bibliography of Missionary Literature," published by the Student Volunteer Movement (price, 35 cents).

The following reference books are suggested for use in connection with the courses named above:

CHRISTIAN STANDARDS IN LIFE

The reference books should include extended accounts of the lives to be studied, together with standard books on the countries in which the workers served.

A CHALLENGE TO LIFE SERVICE

Any reliable volumes dealing with present conditions on the mission field, such as Mott's "Decisive Hour of Christian Missions" and "The Present World Situation" and the biographies of representative missionaries will be found helpful. On the general nature and development of the foreign missionary enterprise three books of special value are, Gulick's "The Growth of the Kingdom of God" ($1.50), Jones' "The Modern Missionary Challenge" ($1.50) and Brown's "The Foreign Missionary" (68 cents). A further reference list will be found in an appendix to the text-book.

World Missionary Conference, 1910 (especially Volumes I and IX). 9 volumes, $5.00; 75 cents a volume.

Lists of reference books on other subjects will gladly be furnished by the Educational Secretaries of the Movement.

Some of the most useful literature for auxiliary reading will be found in the files and current issues of periodicals, which should be regularly scanned for reference material.

A number of missionary text-books have been prepared by various denominations. Among these are some excellent and timely volumes which might well be used in denominational institutions. Every student should be expert in the missionary work of his own church. Full information regarding these text-books may be had from the Mission Boards concerned.

Mention should be made of the University of Chicago's solid course of reading on the Expansion of Christianity in the Twentieth Century.

ADDITIONAL TEXT-BOOKS

Below is given a list of additional Mission Study text-books. Further information about any of them may be had by correspondence with the office.

CORRESPONDENCE and ORDERS FOR LITERATURE

In order to avoid confusion in the office and prevent delay in answering letters and filling orders, it is requested that the following instructions be observed.

CORRESPONDENCE

All correspondence concerning courses in Mission Study, suggestions for leaders, reference literature, the organization of classes, etc., should be addressed to J. Lovell Murray, Educational Secretary, 25 Madison Avenue, New York City.

ORDERS FOR BOOKS

Where not possible to deal through the local bookseller, orders may be sent to the Student Volunteer Movement, 25 Madison Avenue, New York City.

BINDING

All orders should clearly specify binding desired. When this is neglected, correspondence is made necessary, causing delay in shipment.

REMITTANCES

Remittances should accompany all orders. Remit by New York draft, express order, or post-office money-order, payable to the Student Volunteer Movement. If currency is sent, it is at the risk of the purchaser.

C. O. D. ORDERS

When an order without a remittance is received, the books will be sent C. O. D. at expense of the purchaser.

As an accommodation to friends, the Student Volunteer Movement will accept orders for books of other publishers (provided such orders are accompanied with a remittance). No discounts from the advertised prices are allowed.

Complete list of publications of the Movement mailed free upon application.
